Utilization of Small Streams.

In general the land bordering upon small brooks and even larger streams running through farms or fields is entirely useless and in many cases is a nur- BEN. HARDAWAY. sery of noxious weeds and a harbor for vermin. By the expenditure of a little labor or a small sum of money such useless land may be turned to valuable account. By damming the stream a pond of respectable size may be made, which, stocked with fish, will become a source of larger income than several times its area of the best land upon the farm: Fish culture is too often supposed to be a troublesome and fussy business in which one may spend much money to little advantage. But I do not propose fish culture. I suggest stocking the pand thus made with fish of a kind easily kept, which will not require to be fed artificially; such kinds, in fact, as will feed themselves. As a rule, the most desirable things cost for their attainment in proportion to their scarcity and desirability. Trout, among fish, are the choicest kind and the most costly to procure, and it is probable that the man who gets a dollar a pound of trout grown in a pond has well carned his money. Every one can not eat trout, as every one can not drink champagne, but there are agreeable and wholesome fishes, as well as wines, that cost very little, and the average person may well be contented with them. A perch, either white or vellow, is not far behind a trout in flavor and firmness of flesh, and this fish will thrive in any pond above the character of a mud-hole, and in water that is too warm for trout. Eels are easily grown in ordinary ponds, and these are choice meat. Black bass is a choice fish, and may be mixed with chubs and minnows, upon which they will feed. In fact, the kind of fish to be procured is a secondary matter to the making of the pond for them. - Country Gentleman.

Poultry. Poultry has its place upon the farm, in the village yard, and in the hands of the fancier; but the fowl for the breeder or fancier are not generally the kinds for the farmer, and those for the small quarters of the village lot are not varieties for the wider range of the farm. And from the great interest in poultry breeding during the past dozen years. have come many advantages which the farmer and villager may claim and turn to useful account. For instance, patient, careful breeding of many years' trial has been necessary to produce in so great excellence the many different breeds of poultry we now have adapted to different purposes, and these results could not have been reached otherwise than through a careful love for the business, as manifested by those whom we term "fanciers," or lovers of a parwe term "fanciers," or lovers of a parundesirable for general purposes, like all purposes of a Family Ointment. and these funciers, producing with care Sprains, Bruises, Cores, Bunions, Sore different breeds, having distinctive characteristics, have been of great service, because farmers, villagers, and all who keep bens, or love fresh eggs, or who keep hens, or love fresh eggs, or roast chickens in August, are reaping the benefits and advantages of their patient labors. #### Ayer's Hair Vigor, FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
